Subject: Birthday Party

Dear Isabella,

What have you been up to? It's been a while since we met last at school. I have been busy doing my homework, but I went to Hawaii with my family last week. While there, we went hiking on a mountain called Diamond Head. The weather was hot, and it took us about an hour and half to reach the top. The view was just amazing. I highly recommend you see the view someday.

Actually, my brother will turn 12 in September, and my parents are thinking of holding a birthday party for him at our house. I know you are a very good piano player and you write your own music. I was wondering if you could perform some of your music at the party. Weather permitting, you could play in the backyard. If not, maybe you can play in the living room.

The party will be held on September 5, but we haven't decided what time to start yet. I'm helping my parents to plan the events for the party. It would be great if you could let me know by this Saturday whether you can make it or not. If you can't, then I will ask someone else.

By the way, please don't tell my brother that we are planning a birthday party for him. We want it to be a surprise party. It will knock his socks off!

Ciao,
Robert

Reading Section Part 3

Read the story below. The story is followed by five statements on page 11. Write “T” for each true statement and “F” for each false one on your answer sheet.

Jim, the narrator of the story, is the son of an innkeeper. He is hunting for treasure with Dr. Livesey and the squire Trelawney. They have arranged a voyage to an island to find a treasure.

The ship was strong and the weather fine, so we had a good journey. Only Arrow, the mate, caused trouble. He was drunk most of the time. Then one night, he fell into the sea and disappeared. Captain Smollett was not happy about this. He made John Anderson, a good sailor, the ship’s mate in Arrow’s place.

Another good sailor was Israel Hands. He was a friend of Long John Silver. All the crew liked Long John Silver because he had many stories to tell. He was always very kind to me.

“Come and sit with me, Jim,” he often said. “And say hello to Captain Flint.” This was the name of his parrot. It was a noisy bird that was always talking. It didn’t know many words, so it said the same ones again and again.

The squire and Captain Smollett kept away from one another. They did not like one another.

“Smollett was wrong about the crew,” the squire said. “He’ll be wrong about other things.”

Then the squire made the captain angry by giving the men *rum and apples from the barrel.

Captain Smollett spoke to Dr. Livesey about it. “It’s not good to give the men these things,” he said. “The time will come when he will be sorry he did.”

But the apple barrel soon became very important.

One night when we were very near the island, I went to the barrel to get an apple. I was tired and after eating an apple, I sat down in the barrel. There I fell asleep. It was not long before a voice awoke me. A man was sitting near the barrel. It was Long John Silver. He was talking to a young sailor called Dick. He was telling him about his days sailing with *dead Captain Flint. He told him about the life of a pirate.

As he spoke, I realized that Long John Silver was as bad as Black Dog and Blind Pew and other pirates who sailed with him.

Then Israel Hands came up.

“When are we going to take over the ship?” he wanted to know.

“As soon as we get to the island,” Silver said. “Then we’ll make the squire and doctor take us to the treasure.”

“What will you do with them afterward?” Dick asked.

“Kill them,” Silver answered. Then he said to the boy, “Dick, get me an apple out of the barrel.”

I did not know what to do. I knew that if the boy saw me, Silver or Israel Hands would kill me.

Then Hands stopped the boy. “You don’t want an apple, John,” he said. “You need rum. We all need rum.”

He sent Dick off to get the rum. He soon came back, and the three of them began to drink. And then, the voice of the lookout cried, “Land ho!”

Stevenson, R. L. (2009). Long John Silver plans a mutiny. Treasure island (pp. 27-29). Compass Publishing. (Original work published 1883)

*rum : a strong alcoholic drink made from the juice of sugar cane

*dead Captain Flint : a great sailor who was already dead, not the parrot in the story

1. After Arrow disappeared, John Anderson took Arrow’s place.
2. Long John Silver was popular with the crew because he told them many stories.
3. The squire and Captain Smollett got along well.
4. Long John Silver wanted to kill the squire and the doctor after they found the treasure.
5. Dick got an apple from the barrel for Silver, and he found Jim.
